Many not for profit organizations in our community and elsewhere have used Blackbaud software and services for many years. In May of this year, Blackbaud suffered a cyberincidence where certain of the data on their hosted systems may have been compromised. Here is Blackbaud's statement on the incident:

To be clear, this security incident apparently occurred only to those Blackbaud clients who use their hosted services. On premise servers and systems - where the client owns and operates Blackbaud software on local servers, were not affected.

We have reached out to all our clients who have used Blackbaud products and systems over the years. If you have questions, concerns, or would like additional assistance in sorting out this security incident, please contact The Computing Center - we'd be glad to assist.
